COACHING FOR LIFE

SIDE-OUT HAS STARTED A POWERFUL MOVEMENT WITHIN THE VOLLEYBALL COMMUNITY.

Thousands of volleyball teams across the country are joining The Side-Out Foundation's Dig Pink® Rally and other programs that benefit players and support game-changing breast cancer research.

Winning Team

With the help of the volleyball community, Side-Out has raised nearly $14 million since 2005. Each year, more and more teams are joining the only charity using the power and teamwork of the volleyball community to beat cancer.

Teams are choosing to raise funds for Side-Out for good reason. Unlike most organizations, money donated to Side-Out goes directly to its own innovative research that is slowing the progression of stage IV breast cancer, and improving the way all cancers are treated.

Quality Athletes

Participating in Side-Out programs, including Dig Pink® and the Ambassador Program, can help your players fulfill community service hour requirements, build a great resume for college and even earn a scholarship.

Getting your team involved in Side-Out programs also shows parents you care about developing the whole player.

The Role of Coaches

Most coaches say hosting a Dig Pink® event is easy and rewarding. Side-Out offers tools, templates and a dedicated staff person to help you—or the person you appoint as the event organizer—every step of the way. Teams across the country compete off the court to raise the most funds for Side-Out, but your team doesn't have to raise a lot to be a part of the movement. Side-Out features participating teams on its website and in local and national media to shine a light on the accomplishments of coaches and players.

The Side-Out Foundation is the only breast cancer charity supported by the American Volleyball Coaches Association and USA Volleyball.
